ACCIDENTAL DISCHARGE OF SHOT GUN KILLS WIFE

The home of John Andrews of Stonewall, early Sunday morning, was the scene of a terrible tragedy. In the hands of Mr. Anderson a Winchester shot gun was accidentally discharged, the charge taking effect in the body of his wife and causing almost instant death.

Dr. Brico of that place, was at Mr. Andrews' home prepared to make a professional call several miles out. The latter concluded to accompany him. Deciding to take his gun along, Mr. Andrews went into the house picked up the weapon and as he was working the lever to see if same was loaded it was discharged with the awful effect above mentioned. Mrs. Andrews was standing in the doorway just a few feet distant. The contents struck her in the abdomen and she expired in a few moments.

Mr. Andrews has many friends in Ada who sympathize with him in this terrible ordeal. Naturally he is almost crazed with grief. Until a few months ago he lived in Ada working for Freeman & Co. Just four months ago he was married to the daughter of Mr. Cochran, of Stonewall.

SOME REPUBLICANS BALK

Refuse to Serve With Negroes on Fairbank's Reception Committee

Muskogee, I. T. Oct. 20—A tempest has brewed in the republican teapot here and all on account of the local reception committee to entertain Vice President Fairbanks when he arrives Oct. 23. Col George A. Murphey is Chairman of the committee. It was desired to make the committee a large one and give every one a chance. Yesterday when the membership of this committee was announced there were the names of several negroes on the list. It seems that the men who had named the committee were northern republicans.

The southern republicans are highly incensed that they should be named on the same committee with a negro on such an occasion and some of them are freely offering democrats the "honor" that has been thrust upon them.

HEAVY VOTING IN THE QUEEN CONTEST

Considering that this was the first day of the voting contest to decide who is the most popular lady in Ada, there was a very heavy vote cast. Miss Essie Russell has started off in the lead, but from the interest being shown, it looks like anybody's honor as far, and promises to be a very hotly contested race. In addition to being decided the most popular lady in Ada, the winner will be presented with the handsome diamond ring now on exhibition at Warren's jewelry store, and will be crowned Queen of the Band Carnival, to whom all shall pay homage during her reign.

The standing of the different contestants is given below and will be corrected each day as the contest continues:

Essie Russell	100
Lela Chapman	82
Alice Harris	32
Mary Houghton	30
Jessie Blinds	25

MORE THAN 100 PEOPLE PERISH WITH HOUSEBOAT

Key West, Fla., Oct. 22—Survivors from one of the house boats of the Florida East Coast Railway extension along the Keys tell a harrowing tale of death and destruction during the storm on Thursday.

W. P. Dusenberry, civil engineer in charge of the work on Long Key, who miraculously escaped death, arrived here on the Russian steamer Jennie, among other survivors rescued. He says the house boat No. 4 on which were 150 men, was struck by the storm and was driven out into the gulf thru Hawks Channel.

At 6 o'clock the house boat began to break up and the great waves hit her men singly and in bunches of two and three were washed into the sea and drowned. Some went below for protection but when the top of the boat was washed away the waves rushed in and the boat soon went to pieces, thirty or forty of the men being crushed to death in the collapse the others grabbing timbers to save them from drowning. Engineer Dusenberry was in the hold, but succeeded in getting a log and floating until Friday night when he was rescued.

On one piece of timber sixteen men were clinging and nine were hanging to another. The side of the houseboat was crowded with men. It turned over three times, each time reducing the number.

There was another house boat with 150 men on board at Long Key, which Mr. Dusenberry thinks was also swept to sea.

There were in all ten boats at Long Key.

News Item: L. W. Baxter territorial auditor, today paid to the state of Kansas the sum of $14,608.60 for the maintenance of Oklahoma convicts in the Kansas penitentiary at Lansing during the past quarter.

There will be a change when we secure a democratic state government. Those convicts will be put to work on our public roads, and will no longer be allowed to remain a dead expense.

The News of the 17th in an editorial criticized the Republican policy on the school land question, as announced in a Guthrie republican platform of recent date. We simply condemned the idea of selling these lands, and accused the republicans of advocating same, not to destroy a rich school heritage but to appeal to the much needed lessee vote in Oklahoma. The Southern Republican made a feeble stroke in reply, but actually threw up its hands and said: "There is no doubt about the school lands of Oklahoma being kept for school purposes." That's a man. We like to see even a republican sheet express its confidence in the people having foresight and sense enough to safe-guard the state educational endowments, even if such is inconsistent with politics advocated in a brother republican platform emanating from Guthrie.

the election room and announce his name to the two clerks of election, one of whom will deliver to him one ballot, and the other will hand him a stamp. The voter shall then without leaving the room, enter an unoccupied booth and indicate the candidate for whom he desires to vote by stamping a cross in the circle above, or in the square immediately to the left of such candidate's name, after which and before leaving the booth, he shall fold his ballot so that no part of the printed matter thereon will be exposed, and

Rose Ivy

Miss Rose Ivy, whose name in private life is Mrs. R. N. Abby, remained in Howard over Sunday, after her entertainment at the opera house Saturday night. She accepted an invitation to sing at the Presbyterian church Sunday evening, giving two beautiful soprano solos of sacred music, Mrs. Jenkins playing her accompaniments. The announcement at the morning service that Miss Ivy would sing brought out an overflowing house. Her singing was a revelation—an inspiration—a sermon in the most delightful music. After her first song the congregation was so moved that a united and spontaneous encore seemed eminent, when the minister asked Miss Ivy if she would not sing one more number and she did—Howard, (Kans) Times.

Rose Ivy has christened her performance "A Woman's Will." Every body who can should see this astounding exhibition. Miss Ivy has not only a metropolitan reputation but she is known the world over and Ada is to be congratulated. Seats should be reserved at once at Ramsey's drug store. Prices 50 35 and 25 cents.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

How the British Feels Towards Americans

By HON. MOBERLY BELL,
Manager of the London Times.

ON THE general feeling in England toward America it is difficult to write briefly because I think it is so generally misunderstood. The popular feeling in America is, I believe, that until recently there was a strong anti-American feeling here, and that it has now been removed.

So long as that idea remains there will be misconceptions. The fact is that there never was anything but a friendly feeling on this side, though I quite admit it was difficult for an American to realize this.

Have you never seen father and son—the former devoted to the latter, but never understanding him—always too inclined to find fault—too inclined to patronize—too inclined to criticize—the son getting on the father's nerves by 50 little tricks—the son getting irritated and bored by his father's old-fashioned ways and perpetual lecturings? Yet at heart each is proud of the other, and each would back the other against the world.

That is the secret of our relations for a hundred years. What is the change? Only that the father has at last realized that the son is grown up and must no longer be treated as a child, and the son realizes that with all his irritating old-fashioned fussiness and irritability the old man is a real good sort—because his own sort.

Instead of family affection accompanied by the dignified stand-off of the older man to the young and rather pushing boy, there is family affection accompanied by a full recognition of equality. Instead of man and boy, it is man and man.

The average Britisher has a contempt for the "foreigner." By a "foreigner" he means a man who talks a language that he doesn't understand. He doesn't regard any man who talks English (whether it be Scotch, Cockney, Devonshire or American English) as a foreigner—he's just English. He doesn't gush over him; he just sticks to him.

Best Kind of Pull Is Push

By MR. JOHN C. WATSON,
President East Boston Land Co.

Whether push alone is sufficient to give a young man the right start on a career for which he is adapted seems to me to be answered by the history of American industry. It is reasonable to assume that the men who have been the most successful as founders and organizers of the greatest industrial enterprises of our country might have failed utterly to leave any enduring impression behind them if they had enjoyed in early life the pull which would have placed them in comfortable berths in which they could have leisurely watched the world go by.

If, as the motto-book says: "Necessity is the mother of invention," we should have lost a great many valuable inventions if some inventors had never felt the sting of want and the necessity of providing against it, if, in other words, they had enjoyed a pull.

Undoubtedly there is nothing so valuable as a pull which pulls a man away from the chance to be lazy, from the necessity of providing for himself, of obtaining by his own exertions the means of independence. The most potent pull of that kind, with which the world thus far has become acquainted, is push.

One of our prominent magazines recently published the history of the steel industry in America, an industry that is one of the marvels of the world's industrial progress in the nineteenth century. In this account may be read the names of those young men many of them still young men, who were the builders of that gigantic enterprise, and among those names it is impossible to find one that represented the enjoyment of a pull in his early life.

All these men were poor young men, or, at least, men who had to earn their own livings, and who started practically, and in some cases literally at the bottom of the ladder. If they had started anywhere else, the chances are they would not have risen so speedily or surely to the top.

Now, that is true of every other great enterprise in this country. The Goulds, of the second generation, the Belmonts, the Vanderbilts, the Astors, all inherited great wealth, and the heads of these families today indicate that they inherited something else with it, but even they have rivals among the great organizers who started as poor boys, and it is found that in every generation the poor boy that started with only his push has become the rival, at least, and often the master, of the man, however well-endowed with talents and the advantages of education, who was heir to a great pull.

On the whole, I think it may be said that push cannot only find an opportunity without pull, but that pull has often been the grave of push.

Personal Character of Satan

By REV. JOHN ROACH STRATON.

The devil is a personal force and not a natural tendency to do evil with which man is born. All evil of to-day is inspired by a personal devil. The fact of moral evil in a world created by a good and all-powerful God is a mystery that the mind of man can never fully fathom. We can see, indeed, how God in making man must needs make him free unless man was to be a mere puppet or automaton. We can see, too, how this freedom of choice involved the possibility of wrong choice, but we cannot understand how the inclination and purpose to sin ever entered into a mind created pure.

The Bible clearly preaches the personality of Satan and Christ himself explicitly taught this truth. Satan to him was no figure of speech, nor was he a mere impersonal force or tendency. Christ had himself wrestled face to face with the great adversary of God and man, and he knew that he was dealing with a personal force. He always speaks of Satan as the "evil one," and in other ways taught clearly that there is a personal devil who works through hosts of demons.

ONE TYPE OF THE CUBAN REVOLUTIONIST

Many are Freebooters and Cut-Throats Eager for the Opportunity of Plunder.

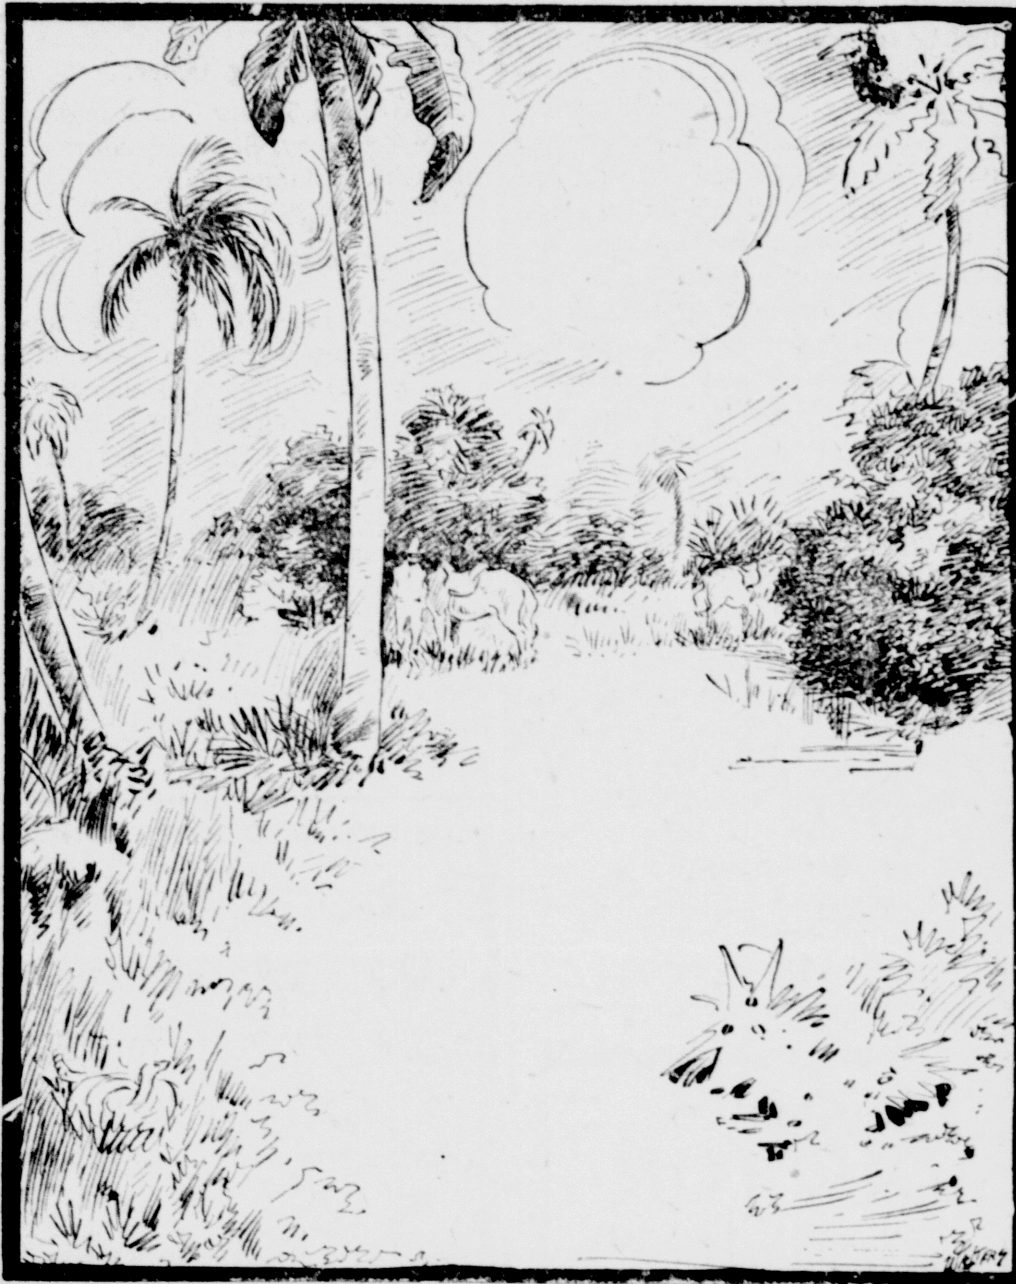

A significant word from Cuba since Secretary Taft went there in effort to bring about amicable settlement of the revolution is that in many cases the insurgents are becoming restless, the discipline is bad and many are breaking up into bands for the purpose of independent movement with view to plunder. The fact of the matter is that many of the revolutionists are what might be called freebooters and cut-throats, and have welcomed the present state of disaffection in Cuba as affording them an opportunity for their lawless deeds, such as they enjoyed in the "good old days" under Spanish rule when murder and rapine were events of every day occurrence.

From its earliest history there has existed in Cuba such lawless class of people. At one time a few generations ago, they infested the coast as pirates, swooping down upon their little sloops or schooners with all unarmed vessels which chanced their way, and as such they were only finally suppressed by the British, who as late as the '30s, drew a cordon around the island outside of the three-mile limit, which with little hesitation they reduced to suit their convenience when it came to the matter of pursuing a suspicious craft. These crafts portunity has occurred they have committed deeds of shocking ferocity, scarcely equaled by those of the savage Indians on our frontier when they were upon the warpath in their most palmy days. In some respects they are worse than our savages, for the Indians made war only upon their enemies and were always true to each other, being bound together by their own laws and traditions. But it is not so with these Cuban freebooters, and it was owing to their treacherous methods, which multiplied with each fresh outbreak of an insurrection, that inspired the Spaniards to commit many of the cruel deeds attributed to them during their struggle to maintain their grasp upon the island.

The Spaniards called these outlaws "bandidos" and always pursued them with more or less relentless vigor, but their buccaneering methods were such that neither the Spanish Guardia Civil nor the Spanish infantryman was very effective against them. They, like the buccaneers of old, lived off the country, and the country supplied all their immediate necessities, whether their depredations were carried on in organized bands or by roaming individuals.

As a rule the most law abiding and were chased into some one of the numerous coves or bays which indent the coast of Cuba, and when their crews were captured they were taken to Jamaica for trial, where it was a short shift between there and the hangman's noose. Frequently the vessels were driven ashore by the English cruisers, and the crews of the pirate ships, making their escape, became pirates on land like the old-time buccaneers of Hispaniola, with the difference that they rarely made war upon the country people, who almost invariably stood in with them.

The remnants of these pirates, or freebooters, have existed in Cuba to the present day, their ranks having been recruited from time to time by the country people who, finding themselves in some difficulty with the authorities, preferred the free, careless life of the freebooter to going to prison. It can scarcely be claimed, except in rare instances, that the present day semi-lawless set in Cuba is formed of the descendants of the original pirates, although their methods and manner of living are about the same. Occasionally an individual may be found who will tell you unblushingly that his father or grandfather was one of the pirates. As a rule these people are without religion, laws, or sacred traditions, and when the oppeaceably inclined peasants stood in with them to the extent of covering up their trails when pursued and accepting a share of their booty, while on the other hand the peaceably appearing peasant, inhabiting some thatched bohio on the edge of a clearing with his wife and children, might possibly be the very robber whose daring exploit had recently aroused a whole town and sent the soldiers out on his trail. The Spanish soldiers never could tell.

In the fertile tropical land of Cuba the life of these freebooters is comparatively easy. As a matter of fact, after these Cuban gentry have tasted of it, it is hard for them to relinquish it. They live in a land of eternal summer, where in normal times cattle, honey and sweet potatoes abound. Why should they work when God has given them so much? The peaceful farmer of the interior, no matter how little he labors in the field, produces a great deal more than he can consume, and he is ever ready to share it with whomever comes along, and consequently the roving freebooter, who would be a simple tramp elsewhere, finds subsistence easy.

He may be a fugitive from justice, and then he learns to look upon all those who are rich or in government service, either as civilians or soldiers, as his enemies, and he only awaits the opportune moment when a leader steps forth to organize him and others like him into a formidable band.

After the insurrection was over and the brief war with Spain had been fought out the country was so completely devastated that such of these ex-freebooters as remained were obliged to come into the towns and cities, where they posed as patriots and came in for their share of loot in the way of Red Cross supplies issued to starving reconcentrados. Then there was that pay which the Americans ceded to Gomez to pay his soldiers, when as a matter of fact his so-called army had been practically exterminated before the beginning of the war with Spain. They came in for some of that.

The supplies and soldiers' pay quieted the turbulent spirit of those former outlaws for a time, although during the occupation of the islands there were many examples of their capabilities

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Gen. Fred Funston, who has gone to Cuba to advise with Secretary of War Taft, and who will command the American forces in Cuba, is well acquainted with conditions in the island, having joined the insurgents there in 1896 and fought 18 months against the Spaniards. Upon returning he was made colonel of the Twentieth Kansas volunteers and went to the Philippines, where for bravery he won a brigadier generalship of volunteers, and later distinguished himself by capturing Aguinaldo. In 1901 he was given the same grade in the regular army.

Gen. Funston was born in Ohio in 1865, and was taken to Kansas 12 years later by his parents. After studying in the Iowa high school and Kansas State university he became a reporter, but soon abandoned the newspaper profession. Subsequently he was appointed commissioner by the agricultural department to report on Alaskan Yukon alone in a canoe. Then his military career began with the Cuban rebels.

Funston, when a member of the insurgent forces in the days of Spanish rule, became acquainted with the leading spirits of the island. These men are now divided into contending forces, some supporting the government. The general's acquaintance, his knowledge of the country and his familiarity with all the by-ways renders him especially qualified to go out into the country and sound what may be termed public sentiment. His experience also eminently fits him for command, for he can place troops where they will do the most good.

BRITISH PEER AS WALL STREET BROKER

"A. K. Fairfax, New York," was the mark on a lot of baggage which arrived in New York by steamer from Liverpool, yet the owner is a direct descendant of one of the most famous houses of the British peerage, being none other than the Rt. Hon. Albert, Lord Fairfax, twelfth of the line of Fairfax.

The life history of Lord Fairfax is most romantic. The house dates back to 1627, the founder being the great Fairfax who was one of the few nobles who sided with Cromwell, and who held chief command at Marston Moor. His son was general-in-chief of the parliamentary forces and gained the great victory at Naseby. When the king came to his own the Fairfax of that day deemed it best to come to America, and about 1739 settled in Virginia, where he bought a tract of land comprising some 6,000,000 acres, and erected two mansions—Brevort and Greenway Court—where he lived in baronial style. The present Virginia family home is Northampton, Prince George county, an estate of about 700 acres, being a part of the original Fairfax grant. Albert Kirby Fairfax was born there, as were his brother and three sisters.

He attended the coronation of King Edward by special invitation and was extensively entertained by the peerage. He bore the title of Lord Fairfax, but drops it on returning to America. Mr. Fairfax is 36 years of age, but looks younger. He will become a member of the firm of William P. Bonbright & Co., Wall street brokers.

THE POPE'S BRILLIANT DIPLOMAT

Cardinal Merry Del Val, papal secretary of state, whose course in the dispute with France is said to have so displeased that republic that a rumor that he is to be removed is greeted with satisfaction in Paris, is, at 40 years of age, one of the most celebrated diplomats of the world. Born in London, the son of a Spanish diplomat, and educated in England and Belgium, he is a thorough master of all the modern languages. His perfect command of English aided him to completely win the good will of the Canadians when he came in 1897 to settle the burning question of the Manitoba schools. It was on his recommendation on his return to Rome that a permanent apostolic delegate was appointed.

He has spent 20 years in the greatest school of diplomacy in the world, the Vatican. Other sovereigns have armies to back up their emissaries but the pope must win through argument alone. Merry del Val is the first cardinal secretary of state who has been able to deal with Catholics of the Anglo-Saxon race in their own language. He is an indefatigable worker and a man of strong character. He has a temper kept well in control, which betrays itself sometimes by the appearance of an indignant flush on his face and by a flash from his dark eyes.

RISE OF A NEW YORK DEMOCRAT

John H. O'Brien, fire commissioner of New York city through appointment by Mayor McClellan, has had a most spectacular rise from an alleged poolroom and bucket shop gambler in Buffalo to the real ruler of New York politics. As Mayor McClellan's right hand man he has been reaping a whirlwind of criticism for the wholesale gambling and corruption that were said to have prevailed in the metropolis while the mayor was in Europe.

John O'Brien first appeared as a formidable rival to the old leaders last winter when Mayor McClellan gave him a banquet at Sherry's. He was put forward as the mayor's candidate against Boss Murphy for the ruler of Tammany, "Big Tim" and "Little Tim" Sullivan, Comptroller Metz, Bird S. Coler and 50 other wigwag leaders attended and started the campaign which has now reached the mad slinging stage.

Concerning John O'Brien's "past" his rivals say that "before he entered the more profitable field of New York, where Mayor McClellan gave him a big red automobile and a uniformed fireman to drive him to the race track every day and enabled him to lose $600 a day on a salary of $600 a month, John O'Brien was known chiefly as an unpretentious gambler in Buffalo.

"For three years before he left Buffalo he had no occupation. He made dollar bets in cheap poolrooms. He patronized the bucket shops. After a run of luck his account with Demary, Heintz & Lyman, brokers, was wiped out. When he finally left town it was noised about that his pathway was strewn with unredeemed 'markers'."

O'Brien went straight to New York. He became a worker for McClellan. In the devious ways of New York politics he developed qualities which has rapidly forced him to the front.

MAN WHO DEFEATED CHURCHILL

Charles M. Floyd, farmer, clothier and manufacturer, of Manchester, N. H., made his campaign on a platform of "a business administration" as against Winston Churchill's battle cry of "down with railroad domination." He owes his victory, which was won by a margin of but 17 out of a total of 799 votes, to the combination of all the opposition to Churchill, when there were four candidates.

Floyd is regarded as one of the public-spirited men of the state. He is essentially a boomer for his home town of Manchester, where he is a mighty force in politics, being especially popular with the young men. He is 45 years of age and was born on the farm which he now owns near Drury. When he was a mere boy he was compelled to go to work to support himself and secured a position in the shoe factory owned by the father of Roscerans W. Pillsbury, the latter being one of Floyd's opponents in the contest for the nomination. Later Floyd learned the clothing business with his brother in Haverhill and then he went to Manchester, where he established a clothing business which has now become the largest in the state.

Floyd's entry into politics was as a member of the Manchester school board in 1898. He was elected to the state senate in 1899. At present he is a member of the governor's council.

Floyd is a firm friend of young men whom he believes to be striving to better themselves and he has put at least three of these through law schools.

VICE PRESIDENT FAIRBANKS CORDIALLY WELCOMED

Scarcely could a citizen of Ada claim he did not wake up in time to attend the Fairbanks reception Tuesday morning, early and cold as it was at 6 o'clock the hour appointed for the arrival of the vice-president's special. For some enterprising spirits by 5:30 had some anvils thundering, and later the band serenaded the streets arousing those who had not responded to the anvils.

Fortunately for the pride of the republicans the special was an hour late, otherwise the crowd would have been humiliated. As it was, when the train rolled in at seven there was a very creditable crowd at the station, to see the "unloading"—though by no means as many as of a circus morning. The vice-president and his party were escorted to carriages and hurried to the Harris hotel for breakfast.

After a half hour in the dining room the party repaired to the platform prepared in front where Mr. Fairbanks was introduced by Judge Winn to the waiting crowd consisting of several hundred men, women and children. In his urbane manner, the vice-president began his address with hat in hand. But soon the morning breeze proved too brisk for his scantily protected pate, so he very sensibly put on the lid. Scarcely had he finished the customary complimentary introduction—nice words about this new and fair land of opportunity—just one or two sentences of a partisan nature intended to make republican votes but quick of comprehension, estimating by the very limited applause, by even the 75 or 80 republicans present, that the several hundred around him were not in sympathy with partisan republican utterances, he gazed weakly around and hurriedly completing his remarks with a few nice words of good by and with some indiscriminate hand-shaking ploughed his way through to the carriage.

In the make-up of the crowd it was obvious that democrats largely predominated—as was to be expected in this community. The distinguished visitor was given a very respectful, not to say cordial, hearing. Yet there was a woeful lack of enthusiasm. There was a noticeable lack of applause and of sympathy with the cause the speaker championed.

Some thirty leading republicans of the new state are accompanying the vice-president today on his swing around the B. I. T. Among them are:

Wm. Johnston of Cartersville; Wm. Busby of McAlester; C. M. Sarchet of Guthrie; H. O. Archer and F. C. Hubbard of Muskogee; J. F. Hargis of Wynnewood; Chas. E. Rogers of Vinita; W. L. McWilliams of Miami; O. A. Wells of Ardmore; Delegate Bird S. McGuire of Pawnee.

The address of the vice-president as reported by the News stenographer, follows:

SPEECH IN FULL

"Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen:—I am gratified for this opportunity to meet you and to speak a few words that will necessarily be brief because of the lateness of the hour of our arrival. We are here, and I feel like congratulating ourselves; we are here notwithstanding we came by rail. Gathered here are men and women from the North and from the South; democrats and republicans; all interested in one great cause, and that is advancement of the social, the commercial and political welfare of each and all. This Territory is one I never before visited. This is the first opportunity I have had to look upon the Indian Territory and its citizenship. I am gratified with what I have seen beyond my expectation, as I was equally so when first permitted to see Oklahoma. I am agreeably surprised at the prosperity and wealth of the Territory. I think that the union which is to come between Oklahoma and the Territory is one which will benefit both. I am glad to see Oklahoma and the Indian Territory join forever in the holy bonds of joint statehood. You come from every part of this great republic and join your future with this community.

"If you want to succeed to the utmost, it is necessary to build well the foundations. It is not enough to have the great fields of cotton and corn, it is necessary that there should be a higher minded citizenship. Operating under laws of this country may you adopt a state constitution; that is a unique experience for you. The constitution to be adopted will last long. It is to be one of the great states of the union. It is to your interest that the men who are to write that great law should be well informed. And it is also well that they be in accord with the great party which is our national pride. For that party has shown itself in the successful advancement of our national interests. Under its ruling prosperity has come to the American people. It is a good thing when you find an agent able to execute your will, and that is what parties are for, to execute the will of the people. It is not a good thing to change parties. Candidates who think well and do well are the ones to elect. These are points on which we must agree as American citizens. We must not go according to prejudice, for prejudice is a violent object; we must go according to our most diligent aims, the welfare of our state and the welfare of our homes.

"I am advised, my friends, that my time is up, and I only have this to leave you in parting, and that is to thank you for your cordial greeting. It is a touching tribute you have paid, not to me, but to the great cause of good government, in which you are so interested. As I leave you, I leave with you the hope that fortune will be yours now and forever, and that you and your households may know nothing except happiness and contentment. I leave this message to all my countrymen, whether or not we are in political agreement, for we are one in the interests of our country."

TREMENDOUS CROWDS GREET MR. BRYAN EVERYWHERE

Indianapolis Oct. 23—William J. Bryan wound up the first day of his Indiana tour speaking before a large audience at Evansville last night.

The days tour by Mr. Bryan was thru the southern part of the state, a special train under the direction of the democratic committee being utilized. At every point where the train stopped a large audience was present to greet Mr. Bryan.

A crowd estimated at over 5,000 persons were assembled at Evans hall to hear Mr. Bryan at the Evansville mass meeting at night. A large number were turned away.

Thruout all of Mr. Bryan's speeches yesterday the point that he asserted the most was that all of the good things that have been accomplished by President Roosevelt and the republican congress have been "borrowed" as he expressed it from the democratic national platforms of 1896, 1900 and 1904.

EXTERMINATED THE FAMILY

Drunken Farmer Slays Wife and Three Children and Then Suicides

Gage, Okla. Oct. 23—O. B. Heywood a well to do farmer living seventeen miles north of this place, Saturday morning shot and killed his wife two daughters aged 22 and 18, and a son aged 20. He then turned the weapon on himself inflicting a mortal wound. Family trouble was responsible for the tragedy.

Heywood returned home drunk from Gage. He was sullen and went directly to his room, where his wife was asleep. The occupants of the house were suddenly awakened by shots.

Young Hayworth was the first to answer the shots. He was shot down by his father before he had time to call for help, and the two girls were killed as they rushed from their room.

FARMERS CONVEINE IN A BUSINESS CONGRESS

Topeka, Kans. Oct. 23—The Farmers Co-Operative Business congress, with a large attendance of delegates from the western and southern states, met here yesterday.

The opening meeting was at the Topeka auditorium at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The first address was by C. S. Barrett of Atwater, Ga., president of the National Farmers Union, who will preside over the meetings. David Overmyre of Topeka, democratic nominee for attorney general, also spoke.

Delegates are here from Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina, Louisiana, Mississippi, Texas, Oklahoma, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas. President Barrett said:

"In the south we have raised the price of cotton to 11 cents. We have built ware houses, and hold out cotton till the price is right. We gin our own cotton, and have cotton mills, woolen mills and canneries, all owned by the farmers. The farmers in the north can do the same with their crops."

Killed By Brotherinlaw

Shawnee Okla. Oct. 21—James Howard was shot and instantly killed at his home fourteen miles north of here last night in a dispute over a crop division. Three shots were fired from a shotgun, the last blowing his head off. John Sanders his brother in law gave himself up.

J. HARRIS

TO THE VOTERS OF THE 87TH DISTRICT

I wish to say that the rumor that the News called attention to last week to the effect that the Farmers Union, either as a county or as a district organization, has put out or endorsed J. J. Burton as their candidate for the constitutional convention is a rumor based on fact. This with all due respect to Mr. Burton, for we respect him as a gentleman of the high type; neither do we believe he is an instigator of such a dirty scheme.

While we are not informed whether or not Mr. Burton's home local indorsed him as a candidate, we do say the Farmers Union, county or district organization, has not endorsed anyone. If the Union should ever conclude to make of itself a political side show, it will certainly come out openly and announce the same.

Now, Mr. Scherer, we would thank you very kindly to keep the fair name of the Farmers Union out of your political doggerly without you have proper authority. We have seen the tears drop from your eyes while you proclaimed in thunder tones that you were in sympathy with us and with our overworked wives and children; now the time has come when every knee shall bow and every tongue confess. So we will confess that we have let you schemers and grafters do our thinking and voting but your wails will be heard no more. By the help of God, we expect to do our own thinking and voting in the future.

Brother farmers, for the sake of your overworked wives and uneducated children please think well before you cast your vote on the 6th of November.

We also thank the Ada News for the defense it has made in behalf of the Farmers Union.

Yours for justice and Union principles,

G. W. BLACK,

Vice Pres., Ada County Union.

E. C. SULLIVAN, Secretary.

[Mr. G. W. Black, true to his Farmers Union principles, after consulting with a large number of his farmer acquaintances throughout the county, in conjunction with E. C. Sullivan, secretary of County Union, brought the above copy to the Ada papers today with request for publication.—Editor.]

DIED

At its home on West Main street last Saturday morning, the Southern Republican, "morning edition," aged twenty days. The death was quite a shock to its political relatives at this place, and the sadness was only made more intense when it was learned this morning that the results mentioned were produced from a broken back, inflicted in an unsuccessful attempt to "make both ends meet."

For several days it has been a matter of general knowledge that the S. R. was in a shaky condition, but the News prefers to publish nothing but material facts, consequently the troubles of the S. R. have scarcely been mentioned before.

The best evidence of the real condition can be obtained from the several printers about town who hold S. R. checks with the inscription, "no funds" marked in the upper left hand corner on the rear side.

The institution was founded on wind and gall to begin with, and even yet, the "modus operandi" is "attempting" to operate an evening daily in Ardmore, a city much larger than this and a place where the chargin will be much greater when that end of the windy "organ" is compelled to yield up the ghost.

During the twenty days of its miserable existence, the S. R.'s special diversion was devoted to a continual attempt to "bull rag" the Ada News, the democratic party and, in fact, every thing that did not exactly coincide with the dwarfed ideas of its "gold-brick" editor. It made a specialty of "butting in" where it had no business, and made a special effort to defeat Carlton Weaver for the democratic nomination for delegate to the constitutional convention. It termed itself the "Great Family Journal" and never lost an opportunity to offer an insult to decent people that would have a tendency to alleviate the contortions of its "fathers" who have groaned incessantly under the weight of a heavy

To the Voters of District No. 87: SEVERE BLIZZARD BRINGS DISTRESS TO THE WEST

Notice is hereby given that in Constitutional delegate District No. 87, the Republican, Democratic and Socialist parties have nominated the below named persons respectively as candidates for the office for delegate to form a constitutional convention for the proposed state of Oklahoma, and that the names of said candidates will appear upon the official ballots under the title and device and in the order, as follows:

In order to vote any one of the foregoing tickets the voter should enter the election room and announce his name to the two clerks of election, one of whom will deliver to him one ballot, and the other will hand him a stamp. The voter shall then without leaving the room, enter an unoccupied booth and indicate the candidate for whom he desires to vote by stamping a cross in the circle above, or in the square immediately to the left of such candidate's name, after which and before leaving the booth, he shall fold his ballot so that no part of the printed matter thereon will be exposed, and shall return the stamp to the clerk from whom he received it and deliver the ballot to the chairman, who shall forthwith, in the presence of the voter, judges of election and watchers deposit the same in the ballot box. Any other mark than the cross-mark for the purpose of voting, or any erasure made on the ballot, makes it void and it can not be counted.

FAIRBANKS MORNING NOTES

It was a democratic crowd allright.

You haven't heard of any converts, have you?

At the hotel they say Mr. Fairbanks is a good "feeder."

We failed to notice his "nibs," Orris L., in the push this morning.

Where was the Southern Republican when Fairbanks came?

The Ada Merchants Band helped out a whole lot. It always does.

And Fairbanks brought the blizzard down from the north.

Fairbanks slept through Shawnee, but he got up and took notice when he reached Ada. He knows a good town when he sees it.

The vice-president is a fine looking man—as long as he keeps his hat on.

Sorter-like the beginning of circus day, wasn't it? Did you go down to see them unload the elephant?

No, dear, the vice-president's altitude does not require a special coach like a giraffe's. They just switch the bell to one side and he stoops at the doorway.

Notwithstanding his stature, Fairbanks is not long on the whirl-wind campaign. It takes him too long to warm up.

The platform may not have been too big for the speaker but it was rather out of proportion to the little post-prandial talk.

Aside from the official stenographer of the Fairbanks party, the News had the only stenographer to report the speech in full.

The vice-president and his secretary were almost alone in their glory. They should have brought on down that bunch of Oklahoma politicians they dumped at Oklahoma City.

Up in Washington the boys sing a song with the refrain: "Everybody Works but Fairbanks"; but he's in the harness now, getting up with the dawn.

At the station, 6 a. m. special due, nine men on the platform, four of them democrats, four visiting republicans and John Beard. Sputtered John thru his chattering teeth: "Drat those old sleepy republicans! Now look at this bunch! I'd give a hundred dollars now if the Fairbanks special would pass this town up!"

Scene: At the press table after the speech. Fairbanks party's official stenographer to Miss Houghton, representing the News:—"This is largely a democratic country, isn't it?"

Miss Houghton—"Most assuredly."

Official Stenog.:—"Well, if it had not been so cold more republicans would have been present."

Miss H.:—"Perhaps, but cold weather doesn't keep democrats away."

Denver, Colo., Oct. 23.—Snow, wind and cold have extended over nearly the entire country between the Rocky Mountains and the Missouri river yesterday, causing heavy losses of live stock and late fruit. Telegraph wires have been prostrated and railroad schedules disarranged.

The storm is almost unprecedented for severity for this time of year, and takes rank, according to the weather bureau, with the snowfall of April 23, 1885.

At some places on the eastern slope of the mountains the snowfall measures three to four feet. While temperatures on the plains have fluctuated from 20 to 30 degrees above zero, it has been much colder at higher altitudes.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 23.—A blizzard prevailed yesterday in Western Kansas, which was the most severe for this time of the season in many years. It has been snowing steadily for twelve hours in that part of the state and the snow, driven by a heavy wind, is stopping railroad traffic and playing havoc with telephone and telegraph wires. It is believed that heavy loss to stock will result.

Wichita Falls, Tex., Oct. 23.—A norther struck this city at noon yesterday and the thermometer dropped 12 degrees, with indications of nearing freezing point before morning.

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 23.—A blanket of snow of six inches or more fell last night in Northeastern Minnesota, covering Vermilion and Mesaba ranges and extending as far west as Fosston.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the controller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

Rose Ivy Co

Miss Rose Ivy in her double role of "Mystery and Music" will be seen at the opera house Tuesday Oct. 23rd. The first part of the program will be devoted to music, when Miss Ivy will sing some of her choicest selections.

The second part, in which she is assisted by some 200 local gentlemen, she will give an exhibition of her "phenomenal power" over human beings.

Fancy a woman who when you touch her so annuls your strength or upsets the law of gravity until ten men combined cannot lift her, but who in turn lifts the same ten men.

She touches a child and renders it equally immobile; who stands with her fingers interposed on the proscenium and eighteen men cannot move her.

And on she goes from one astounding feat to another, until one wonders what it is she cannot do.

Miss Ivy has a remarkably fine voice, a dramatic soprano with which she entertains her audience in classical selections.

Miss Ivy will be assisted in her performance by Mlle Florence Rozelle, a pianist, mandolinist and singer. Prices 25 35 and 50 cents.

W^M A. RADFORD
EDITOR

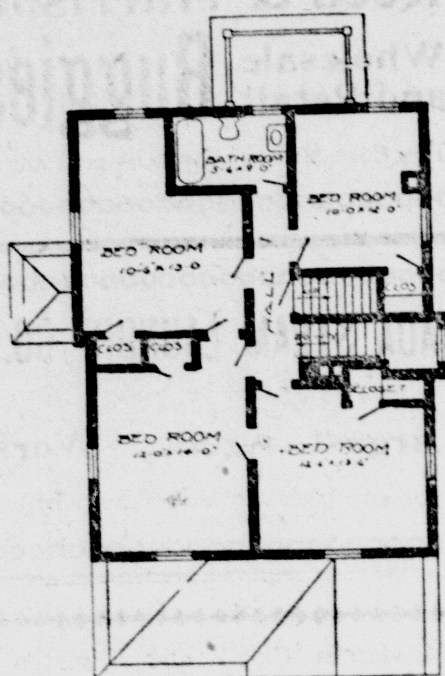

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 124 Fifth Ave., Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Houses are not as large as they used to be, when measured by size alone. The increasing cost of lumber, labor, and other building expenses have induced many economies, but inventing architects have made better use of the smaller space, so that an eight room modern house contains a great deal more conveniences than an eight room house built 20 years ago, although the outside dimensions of the older house may be very much larger. Twenty years' study in this direction has resulted in many improvements, both in design and by way of adding a multitude of small conveniences.

Formerly little attention was paid to the spacing of doors and windows, in order to admit of placing the furniture conveniently or artistically. Only of late has the possibility of a small house for comfort and convenience been recognized. It requires a space at least four and a half by six feet to accommodate a good sized, comfortable bed, and this space should not be interfered with by placing windows or doors in the way. The advancing price of coal is another strong argument for a small house. It is easy to be comfortable in the winter time in a few well arranged rooms with a small furnace under them that will easily consume six or seven tons of coal, and a reception hall, and may be used for a lounge room. The open grate suggests a great deal of comfort in this little reception hall.

There is another advantage in building a house of this shape, and that is the ease with which it may be ventilated. By leaving the door open in the upper stairway to the attic there is sure to be a current of air passing up which will keep the atmosphere in the house in good condition. Pure air in a house induces personal comfort at the time and permanent health afterwards. The atmosphere in many dwelling houses is so loaded with impurities that persons confined to the house for many hours at a time

It is quite possible to be very uncomfortable in the winter in a large house with a big furnace that will eat up 15 or 20 tons. I have had experience in both directions, and I very much prefer a smaller house, with the reduced expense and lighter care. The curse of this country has been the desire for show. As soon as a man gets a little money ahead, he wants to demonstrate the fact in some conspicuous manner. The first thing he thinks of is a large, showy house, which usually gives him an endless amount of trouble, often worries his wife into an early grave and leaves a trail of dissatisfaction and disappointment.

"This house contains eight rooms. It

First Floor.

Is 27 feet wide and 34 feet 6 inches long, exclusive of porches; it has a good cellar, is full two stories in height, and has an attic. There is a front and back stair, or rather a combination that answers the same purpose, and the house is arranged for convenient, satisfactory and economical heating. The outside entrance to the dining-room is a feature that may be made very attractive and it may be made to save a great deal of tracking through the front hall, which in this case is designed for are sure to contract that tired feeling. For some unaccountable reason the air that they are breathing is the last cause thought of. Persons so afflicted think that they have been working too hard or have eaten something that did not exactly agree with them, and the first step is to dose themselves with medicine. The study of nature is one of the most neglected. It will be hard to convince a person who suffers from sore throat, catarrh, influenza or kindred complaints that the cause is the miserable atmosphere that they are forcing themselves to breathe, but such is very often the case. I like to see plenty of windows for this reason, if no other; windows never shut tight, there is always a crack or two where pure air may creep in, but where windows are plentiful there is an inducement to open one even in cold weather, and this is a greater blessing than some persons realize. In building a house the subject of ventilation should be carefully considered.

Another point that is often overlooked is in selecting a plan that admits of placing the living rooms and bedrooms that are used the most on the south side of the house. The hall, stairway and some other rooms that are not used so much may just as well face the north. Sunlight is a great purifier. The direct rays of the sun will kill disease germs and it is the best disinfectant known. Besides this, bright sunshine induces cheerfulness, and a cheerful disposition is a Godsend in any house.

In this dining-room connection is made with the pantry, an arrangement that some housekeepers prefer to having a sideboard in the dining-room. It provides more room for an opportunity to get behind the dishes to arrange them on the shelves. This arrangement is for utility, while too many sideboards are designed more for looks than convenience. This arrangement looks all right, and it has an additional advantage of not occupying any space in the room. Twelve by 17 feet is a good size and a good shape for a dining-room. It admits of a good, long dining table, without wasting much room at the sides. A square dining-room is not so easily arranged to advantage.

LEGALLY DEAD

BY ARTHUR LE BOUILLIER

"O' course I did," answered the one addressed. "I seen him as clost as I am to you, Mary Mulligan. He come up to Toozzy Ann Bugle's door an' was talkin' awful strong to her, an' she a tellin' him as how he were dead an' gone an' she'd have nothin' more to do with him. Then he begun stormin' away 'till Eddie Casey come out an' druv him off, sayin' he didn't want no old corpses botherin' round the Avenue. This mornin' he told me brother, Jimmy Kennedy, he'd come back an' have the law of 'em an' get his rights."

Without saying a word to his wife or giving the slightest hint of his intentions, Mr. Bugle had simply walked away one fine morning and never come back. Toozzy Ann—the popular rendering of her baptismal name Arethusa Annita—shed tears, as became her sex, and, after fruitlessly visiting the morgue several times and mentioning the matter at the police station, settled down to do as best she could alone.

As year after year passed by and her husband did not return, Toozzy Ann gave up all idea of ever seeing him again, and consulted Father Peter of the chapel, and a legal gentleman who collected rents on the avenue, as to whether she might marry again. She was told that according to law, in seven years she might consider her husband dead and have all the privileges of widowhood, and also claim the few hundred dollars life insurance that had been carried by him for her benefit.

The necessary formalities having been complied with, Toozzy Ann, who had been made "executor" as she called it, accepted the attentions of Mr. Eddie Casey of the coal yard; the wedding day was set, and the guests, who included all the inhabitants of the Avenue, bidden to the festivities.

So when the long-lost Mr. Bugle had unexpectedly turned up on the night before, his return was looked upon with great disfavor by the Corinthians, who considered that they had not only been defrauded of a wake by the unusual manner of his decease, but might also be deprived of a wedding by his untimely resurrection.

After the unexpected visit of her deceased husband, poor Toozzy passed a wakeful night of tears and perplexity, and was glad to welcome Father Peter at a nearly hour in the morning.

"Oh, Father Peter, it's a sinful tribulation I'm in," wailed Toozzy Ann. "Here I am, the widow of a corpse and him not dead nor buried, but comin' back and wantin' his property. The court said he was dead an' he himself says he's livin' an' comin' round every blessed minute to have his rights. With Eddie Casey wantin' to beat him with a club, an' when I have me new clothes all bought an' elegant new furniture for me sittin' room presented to me by me new husband an' every one an' all invited," and Toozzy wept copiously into the corner of her blue checked apron.

"My daughter," said the priest soothingly, "it's a painful 'ting to have a deceased husband return in the mortal flesh, and especially a great tribulation to those about to marry with the blessing of the church. Moreover, it may be I'll have to get a dispensation to complete the bans."

"Thank your reverence," said Toozzy, whose lamentations had prevented her from hearing distinctly. "If you'll get me the dispensary I have the band already. Didn't I engage a dago to bring himself an' another Eytalian with his fiddle for the dancin'. An' to think o' me in me beautiful white—"

A tremendous uproar at the street door interrupted her, and running with Father Peter to the window, she saw the defunct and her betrothed struggling about the pavement, surrounded by most of the youthful Corinthian court population, who encouraged them with shrill hoots and shouts of derision; while Toozzy's canary in the window burst into joyful song, as if thanking heaven for a fight.

"Come out o' that, ye hyena!" shouted Eddie Casey. "What do ye want rubberin' in where ye don't belong for?"

"Let me go, you thief!" angrily retorted Mr. Bugle. "I want me property, an' me wife what's been longin' for me for seven year an' more."

"Longin' for ye, ye old deserter!" piped up the little sparrow-faced woman, who had edged her way into the front row. "It's a good riddance ye wor. An' yer dead—dead as Noah in the ark. There's Father Peter in the windy, ask him, if ye ain't a corpse. Him an' the court says yer dead an' buried long ago."

"The court be dam!" ejaculated the deceased one. "What did I die of? Where's me stificate if I'm a corpse? Where's me hearse? Ye're all crazy an' want to defraud me o' me rights. But ye won't do it. I'll have ye all in jail for purloinin' me property, I will!"

He made another rush for the door and the scuffle threatened to become general, when a policeman elbowed his way through the crowd, and seizing Eddie Casey and Mr. Bugle by their collars, demanded:

"Now then, what's this here trouble? Can't you people be decent and behave yourselves? You're up to more devilment than the whole ward put together."

Whereupon he hauled the two away to the station, where they were put under bond to appear before the magistrate in the morning, for a settlement.

The result may be gathered from the account given by Toozzy to the Corinthians at her wedding supper, which took place according to schedule the following evening.

"Is he dead sure enough, Toozzy Ann?" asked one of the guests.

"Sure he was when he walked out o' the court," answered Toozzy. "We was all up there together, an' when the judge come in everybody stood up, an' he orders them to bring out the criminals for trial."

"Finally me old man, me first husband I would say, stood up and says he's defrauded out of his property an' his only wife. An' the lawyer of the court asks him where he was for seven year an' better, and does he know he's dead accordin' to law."

"I were just seekin' my fortune," says he, 'beyond the seas,' he says, 'an' I see no signs of me disease,' he says.

"Then they asks Father Peter is he dead or no, an' Father Peter says to the best of his knowledge an' belief an' accordin' to the court he's dead an' buried."

"With that me old man, that is me first one, wants to know is he dead for certain; an' they tells him he is, sure enough."

"So he says, 'How can ye arrest a corpse? Where's the coroner?' says he. 'He's the only one to date with the remains of the departed,' he says. 'An' how can ye touch me, even if I do murder or arson or any other crime, bein' dead?'"

"When he said that the policeman looked kind o' scart, an' one o' them whispers to another 'What is this, anyhow?' An' the judge scratches his little chin whisker an' looks in a big book; while the lawyers all whispers together. I felt kind o' creepin' me self to think maybe I was hanted, an' Father Peter he crossed himself, an' none of them could say a word."

"Then me old man, that is me first venture, calls out to them, 'You're a lot o' fools, anyhow!'"

"Contempt o' court!" hollers the judge.

"It ain't!" shouts me old man. "How can a dead one make ye more contemptible than ye are already? Look in yer big book ag'in an' answer me that," he says. "If I'm dead I'm dead, an' no one can be executed for the same crime twict."

"Upon me word I felt proud of his law eddication before all them smart lawyers, for he put awful hard proposals to them altogether. Then he turns to Eddie Casey settin' there kind o' scornful, that is me present husband, and says he, 'I wish ye joy o' me widdy, an' when ye're married may it be a wake over me mortal cadaver'—whatever he meant by that I don't know, but it sounded bad—an' I drink a glass to the health o' the dead an' gone," he says. An' with that he walks out o' court, an' no one dast stop him nor say a word. It was like they was all—what's the word again?"

"Drunk," suggested one of the company.

"No, not drunk. Par—pary—"

"Paralyzed."

"Yes, that's it. An' the judge told Father Peter he could marry us accordin' to law an' no harm done. So me an' Eddie Casey got married anyhow."

"Here's long life to the corpse!" cried Eddie Casey, raising his glass of stamping punch.

And all joined in the toast.

Judge Loves a Joke.

Justice Dickey, of the New York state supreme court, occasionally enlivens proceedings with jocular remarks to witnesses and lawyers, his honor being careful generally that the laugh is not on himself. The other day, however, a young lawyer turned the tables in clever fashion. He had been laboring through an opening address, when the court remarked, rudely: "Why don't you tell us what this suit is about? You're beginning at the end and going backward like a crab. I don't like crabs." This gave the young lawyer an opening. Remembering that Justice Dickey lives in Newburgh, he retorted at once: "I don't like crabs, either. As a matter of fact, I don't like any crustacean, and since your honor has opened the subject, permit me to say that especially I don't like lobsters, and more especially dislike them a la Newburgh." The trial proceeded to a conclusion without further reference to matters outside the law and the evidence.

The Stormy Equinoxes.

"The popular belief that storms are more frequent about the time of the equinox, or when the sun crosses the line," in March and September, receives some slight degree of support from the recent investigations of European scientists," states an expert of the weather bureau. "In southwestern Europe March is the stormiest month, while in the British islands and Norway, January takes the lead in that respect; but, considering Europe as a whole, it appears that storms preponderate near the seasons of the equinoxes."

Answered.

"Why don't you hire somebody that thoroughly understands every part of an automobile?"

"Because," answered the discouraged and dusty tourist, "there isn't any such person."—Washington Star.

Remove Unsightly Wrinkles.

A BALL FILLED WITH COLD CREAM WILL PLUMP OUT THE THIN SPOTS

FILL YOUR HAND WITH OIL AND RUB IT ON YOUR FACE, AND NECK

A HOT SPONGE WILL STEAM YOUR SKIN

Wrinkles make age. Nothing else does, and any woman in the world may remain young if she will.

The fountain of youth, for women, at least, has been discovered and the discovery was proved by an English noblewoman who died a few days ago in London.

She was 62 years of age when she died and she had the complexion and skin of a woman of 25. She had kept herself young and solved, for herself at least, the problem of remaining young.

These are some of the young-old Englishwoman's rules as revealed by her maid:

The deep creases of old age must be treated by steaming. Make a sort of cap for your face and bind it on with straps and strings. The best material is plain white flannel of the soft, cheap variety, rather heavy and not inclined to shrink.

The face cap is made in one piece. The flannel is cut in a circle. A hole is then cut in the middle. And the hole is just large enough to accommodate the eyes, the nose, and the mouth. Strings are then sewed on and the cap is tied in the back.

It is best to take two or three thicknesses of flannel and sew them together, padding them somewhat. A hole is then cut in the middle and the cap is put on the face. It is so fitted that the flannel covers the forehead, the chin, and the cheeks. But there is a hole in the middle, through which the eyes, nose, and mouth can be seen.

The flannel should be dipped in hot water. It should then be rung out lightly and applied to the face. It will tingle and it should be left on until it feels comfortable, or until the skin begins to sweat. This sweating of the face is the best of all things known to the complexion specialist. It opens the pores and takes out the dirt.

Now, while the face is warm, a little hot water can be dashed over it to cleanse the pores. And then the massage begins.

Let the wrinkles of the forehead be the first ones to treat. They run in two opposite directions.

There are the crossways wrinkles, which run from the temple locks to the temple locks. There are the little narrow wrinkles, which run up and down between the eyes and directly over the nose.

Take the nose wrinkles and rub across them. Rub from side to side. Never up and down. These "nose" wrinkles, as they are called, are the ones that lie directly between the two eyebrows. They are right over the nose and they are the most disfiguring of all wrinkles. They make the face look scowling.

Dip the finger tips in your skin food and rub across these wrinkles. You will be amazed to see how quickly they will disappear. Of course, they will come back again. But you can plump out the skin with the food and drive the wrinkles away.

The next day the nose wrinkles will be back again. But they will not be quite so deep. And you can massage them away again. And so you can keep on. You can massage them every night and, in time, they will all be gone. But you must always rub across them. Never up and down. They will only be the deeper.

The forehead wrinkles that run from side to side or from temple to temple, all the way across the forehead, can be treated by rubbing them up and down. Take lots of skin food, rub up and down—always moving at right angles to the wrinkle—and in time you will see these lines begin to yield. They usually are deep and hard to reach. But they are not so disfiguring, because, in the case of a woman, they can be wholly or partially hidden by the hair dressing.

STYLES IN FAVOR.

Above the elbow the sleeves are large leg o' mutton in shape, gathered into the shoulders, and at the elbows with smocking, in tiny tucks, or with shirring. The sleeves alone give these waists a smart and dressy effect that is lacking with most such patterns, and will make them as appropriate for afternoon wear as for street use.

A model that will doubtless be a favorite with young girls has a strip of lace down the front plait, with a piece at either cuff. These touches of white give a pretty, fresh, and youthful appearance to even black waists that will be readily adopted by matrons and those who think that plain black is too severe.

These tailored silk waists are not severely plain, as the word "tailored" implies, at least those that are fashionable now, for though simply made they are quite ornate, being trimmed with flutings of the materials of which they are fashioned, and with buttons, either covered with silk to match, a contrasting shade, or with ones that give a brightness that is a new departure with the regulation shirt waist patterns.

Tucks and plaits are characteristic of these waists, and unless there are a series of, three or four fine pintucks in the back or front, or two or three plaits, half inch size, in a semi-fitting back and a loose front, the models will lack the stamp of fashion that is essential for an up-to-date woman nowadays.

The sleeves, too, unlike those in the average shirt waist, are dressy. They are tight fitting from the waist to the elbow, and plain or with small tucks or plaits. Some of them are fastened on the underside with tiny pearl buttons or those in bright gilt or imitation silver to match the ones used on the waist.
